COURT MODIFIES INJUNCTION IN SEWER BUILDING

Bradbury's Action Against
City Is Reopened Before
Judge Gager.

Owing to inability to finish work on the trunk sewer running along Housatonic avenue, the city of Bridgeport yesterday received permission from Judge Gager of the Superior court to extend the time limit for completion until July 1. The matter came up when a motion was made in the injunction proceedings brought by Frederick L. Bradbury against the city. The court was asked to allow a modification of the injunction granted by Judge Green in 1913.

This injunction was obtained after East Bridgeport residents had complained of the obnoxious odors from the sewers emptying into the Pequonock river. The city was allowed until October 1, 1915 to complete the trunk sewer on the east side of the river so that no dry weather sewage should be emptied into the river at any point between Berkshire Mill land Congress street.

The city was ordered to have the trunk sewer on the west side finished by April 1 of this year but on account of the bad weather work was delayed. For that reason the modification of the injunction was asked.

Spain's New Sketch
To Be Produced Here

Friends in this city of John J. Spain, of New Haven, are planning to turn out in force at Poll's Monday to witness the production of Mr. Spain's vaudeville comedy "There

FISKE CONDEMNS NAVY SYSTEMS IN ROUNDEST TERMS

Says It Will Take Five
Years To Build Up
Fleets.

Washington, Mar. 25.—Fear Admiral Fiske, the storm centre in the row between the attackers and defenders of the efficiency of the navy, finally appeared before the House Naval Committee yesterday, after a long contest between the two factions. Since his retirement as one of Secretary Daniels' aides, Admiral Fiske has been a constant critic of the naval administration. Yesterday he testified that, in his opinion, the navy could not be put "into condition within five years, and that no matter how much Congress appropriated, it could not be accomplished until the system which directs it was as good as that of any foreign navy."

The witness, put through a running fire of questions by the committee, declared his idea was that the duties of a chief of operations should be fixed beyond the power of a Secretary of the Navy to change or practically abolish.

"As long as we have every four years a Secretary of the Navy who makes a radically different change in strategy of the navy we will fall short of our rivals," he said.

The most efficient navies are the German and the Japanese, and in both countries it is required that the Secretary of the Navy shall be a naval officer. I am not going that far. It is not the policy of this country to put the military above the civil.

In some countries great attention is paid to strategy. We have naval instructors but no naval strategists.

"Really strategy is as important as the military," suggested Representative Britten.

"That is like asking the difference between one's brain and one's legs," responded the witness.

The witness said that, in the first disagreement between the Admiral and Secretary Daniels was not over the fleet remaining in Mexican waters so long as to impair its efficiency.

The witness said that was not exactly correct, but he felt the efficiency of the fleet was impaired by the stay in Mexican waters, and he had thought it his duty to lay the strictly military aspect before the Secretary.

Representative Britten insisted that it was plain the admiral had resigned from his post as aide for operation because of some disagreement with the secretary. The admiral, however, would not admit a disagreement.

He did say, however, that the department disregarded a request from Admiral Dewey that he be assigned to the General Board and sent him to the War College.
